Volunteerism is Fulfilled at Kiwanis

Club to residents: 'Come be one of us!'

"It was a happening at Harold's, the second Wednesday of the month for lunch, as 40 Kiwanis members gathered to enjoy each other's company and be brought up to speed on club activities," shared Communication Committee member Bob Moore.

And there is plenty going on.

Many residents may know of a group that has benefited from Kiwanis, like the Cave Creek Museum, or a student who was the recipient of one of their scholarships. Money in the pocket requires a future commitment. Bob Swan of the Funds Appropriation Committee explained how those supported activities receiving grants confirm that the funds will be used in compliance with their application requests. Swan has been part of an Accountability Committee that follows up with everyone and checks on the activity funding.

With 21 new members since October, the club says that Steve Morse, chairman of the Membership Committee, along with the assistance of his team, has been busy with introductions, inductions and setting members up in the Partner Program (headed by John Dionne) so that they can quickly meet other members and find just the right volunteer position for their skills and interests. But it doesn't stop there. Morse reminded all that, while recruiting is important, so is retention. And the Membership, joined with the Communication Committee, are keeping the connection by expanding their branding with new school scoreboards and banners, new ads and social media.

To those who have an urge to volunteer and make an impact while being rewarded at the same time, Kiwanis extends an invitation, "Come be one of us!"
